Stop Hunger Now is a program that has made a major contribution and effort in creating an assembly process that combines rice, soy, dehydrated vegetables and a flavoring mix including vitamins and minerals into small meal packets. The cost of this package, which has a shelf life of two years, and can feed a family of five, is only $0.29. The Minority Association for Pre-Health Students Organization, Rutgers Real Estate Club and Rutgers Students for Justice in Palestine at Rutgers University-Newark are collaborating with Stop Hunger Now and many other co-sponsors* in holding a drive on campus this spring semester. The meals support development programs including school feeding programs, vocational training programs, early childhood development programs, orphanages, and medical clinics.
