Kill Anything That Moves:

Nick Turse on the hidden history of the American war in Vietnam

Events such as the notorious My Lai massacre have long been taught as isolated incidents in the Vietnam War, carried out by a few “bad apples.” But as award-winning journalist and historian Nick Turse has shown, violence against Vietnamese noncombatants was pervasive and systematic, the consequence of orders to “kill anything that moves.”

Turse, who received his MA in History at Rutgers-Newark and holds a PhD in Sociomedical Sciences from Columbia, will present excerpts from his New York Times bestselling book and discuss his investigations into Vietnam War archives. A book signing will follow the presentation, with copies of the recently-released paperback edition available for purchase. Refreshments will be served.

Sponsors: the College of Arts & Sciences; the Federated Department of History; the Center for the Study of Genocide and Human Rights; and the Psychology Department.

Monday, February 10, 2014

12:00 – 1:30 pm

Dana Room, Dana Library – 4th Floor

On the campus of Rutgers University, Newark / information: pboxer@rutgers.edu